

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a security paper consisting of at least two paper fibre webs, wherein the first web is embodied in the form of an external web provided with at least one authentication element and the second web comprises a reinforcing element which is substantially absent in the first web and selected amongst materials improving mechanical strength, and/or another authentication element and the authentication element of said first web substantially absent in the second web. A method for producing the inventive security paper is also disclosed.